The part leaders expressed "pleasure that at present the trend of international detente is the main feature of the development of the situation on the European continent and in the world," and cited Victnam and Laos, the South Asian subcontinent and the Middle Fast as areas where success had been achieved. But leaders of the seven nations' Communist parties, who attended the pact meeting, warn-ed that "the forces of imperialism and reaction have not laid down arms and are trying to check or

Their communiqué also ap-

Another View of Calley Case

The Vietnamese hamlet of My Lal has faded from American consciousness—a memory as distant and distasteful as the war itself. Thus, the reduction of 1st Lt. William L. Calley's sentence from 20 to 10 years, ordered by Secretary of the Army Howard H. Callaway, may seem faintly irrelevantunless a case involving coldblooded murder transcends questions of topicality.

Almost as soon as Lt. Calley was sentenced to life imprisonment for murdering "not less tban 22 Vietnamese," all of them unresisting civilians, the case turned into a political issue rather than a criminal one. Responding to a misguided emotional campaign, President Nixon ordered the authorities to let Lt. Calley wait out his appeals in the comfortable confinement of his hachelor officer's quarters. The commanding general of the Third Army subsequently reduced his sentence to 20 years, and a federal judge freed the ileutenant from house arrest. The case still awalts final special review by the President.

For the moment, however, the focus of the case is on Secretary Callaway's finding of "mitigating circumstances indicating that Lt. Calley may have sincerely believed that he wes acting in accordance with the orders he had received and that he was not aware of his responsibility to refuse an illegal

Sympathy for Lt. Calley has always been inspired to some degree by an understandable rejuctance to make a low man on the military totem pole the scapegoat for sins committed at higher levels. The lieutenant's superiors were quickly exonerated in separate actions by different courts, while high-ranking generals who covered up the massacre were never tried at all.

Now, with the higher links in the chain of command safely exonerated. Mr. Cailaway has introduced as "mitigating circumstances" the possibility of illegality in the orders issued from above. The original whitewash of those who ought to have been called to account now turns into justification of another whitewash at the end of the line. The case thus becomes an example of the downward moral spiral that results from loss of accountability in a military system of com-

This is not to suggest that the answer at this fate atage ought to he vindictiveness against Lt. Calley, who will now be eligible for parole in less than six months. Rather, the necessity is to avoid adding to this somber history, in the name of review, any White House act that would leave in doubt the genuineness of this country's repudiation of hrutalities too loathsome for any civilized nation to condone.

Bonn's Atlantic Decision

The critical debate on both sides of the Atiantic over the future relationship hetween the United States and a uniting West Europe has subsided under the uncertainties of the French presidential election. But, whatever the election's outcome, the shape of this relationship is more likely to be determined by the weight of opinion in the other eight nations of the Common Market, where resistance to French advocacy of a superindependent Europe has stiffened.

The renewed commitment to improved machinery for consultation with Washington, expressed in a speech here last week by Foreign Minister Walter Scheel of West Germany, reflected a growing West European consensus. The problem, as Secretary of State Henry Kissinger has expressed it, is that the hilateral relationships between the United States and each of the nine member governments of the European community have tended to atrophy without being replaced by a new mechanism for unlfled European negotiation with Washington.

Up to now the Common Market countries have precluded joint or separate consultation with the United States until, after endless haggling, they agreed unanimously on a common policy. Changes in that policy then became virtually impossible to renegotiate. The Scheel proposal would authorize the community's political committee to meet with American representatives for formal discussions of policy papers affecting U.S. interests before forwarding them to the council of ministers for decision,

By contrast, the French counterproposal would hold those discussions much laterthrough talks on the ministerial level after the council of ministers had reached, but not finalized, nlne-nation agreement, Mr. Scheel made it clear here just week that this was unacceptable and that France's partners were determined "to devise a mutually satisfactory European - American consultation procedure." Uitimately, he predicted, Washington will have a single partner, a united Europe, "closely and permanently connected with the United States." Until this much needed development, the Common Market countries would speak to America both individually and as a group of nire.

What this means is that Bonn, which always has "fused to choose between Wasbington and Paris, has now joined Britain's new Labor government for the first time in publicly putting France on the spot. If Paris will not agree to a formal consultation mechanism, its Common Market partners will consult the United States individually. isolating France and bringing Washington's views into Common Market discussions any-

Leavening in Brazil?

Brazil's new President, Ernesto Gelsel, has allowed something to happen there that should not go unnoticed. He has permitted expiration of a 10-year ban on political activity, invoked after the 1964 coup by the military leaders against more than a hundred prominent Brazilian political figures, including three former presidents.

The decree, making "cassados," or unpersons, of ex-presidents Kuhitschek, Quadros and Goulart, along with so many who served in their administrations, was a black mark against the military rulers. It would have been ludicrous to renew it after it had been in effect for a decade, though frightened men undoubtedly nrged Gen. Gelsel to do exactly that.

Of course, the rights restored are limited ones, and the President's justice minister went out of his way to qoash hopes for a general political leavening. He warned that the ban could be reimposed "immediately, if necessary," and that the restoration would not allow comebacks for those "responsible for the situation that threatened our country Nevertheless, in this instance. Gen. Gelsel did act wisely and moderately. The hope must he that this decision is but a modest first step in the "gradual but sure progress toward democracy" that he pledged after his inauguration last month.

International Opinion

British Industry for Europe British industry evidently figured very low.

if at all, on the list of those consuited by the Labor government before it embarked on tha "renegotiation" of Britain's membership of the Common Market under threat of withdrawal. The Confederation of British Industry, after allowing Mr. Cailaghan to hold the stage unchallenged much too long, has now come out with a spirited intervention that makes his performance look like "Hamlet" without any extraneous and superfluous Prince of Denmark. Withdrawal, the CBI said, would be "absurdity and madness," leading to aggravated economic crisis and unemployment. Its members, concerned with Britain's good name in trade as well as diplomacy, were "appalled" that a British foreign secretary should be proposing to tear up a solemn treaty. The majority of buslnessmen in favor of membership, originally 70-30, was now virtually unanimous.

The CBI is strongly in favor of using the existing machinery for negotiating orajor changes in the European communities' policies from within-notably with regard to agriculture, regional aid and budget contributions. Its arguments that the consequences of withdrawal would he "catastrophic" are irrefutable. . . .

Latest Word From Warsaw

The final communique issued at the end of the Warsaw Pact meeting in the Polish capital shows clearly that the Kremlin is sticking to its previous European conception and pushing for a rapid conclusion to the Geneva negotiations on "security and cooperation" in Europe. The latest Warsaw postulates are aimed at an accelerated tempo and elimination of those Western Ideas which run counter to the objectives and tactical moves of the Soviet Union and its satellites. The communique shows no signs of a willingness by the East bloc to compromise on disputed issues.

The UN Visit of Teng Hsiao-ping

By James Reston

WASHINGTON-A few days ago, Teng Hsiao-ping, the new 70-year-old deputy premier of China, flew to New York, had a long private conversation with Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and flew back to Peking again as suddenly as he arrived.

This was Teng's first visit to the West in 48 years, and it may be that he merely wanted to see the UN in operation and show China's respect for the special session there on the price and distribution of raw materials in the world. But the assumption of most diplomats was that like most world leaders these days, he wanted to see Kissinger.

This is becoming a common occurrence: When in doubt, see Henry. Something very unusual is going on now in the relations between the nations. The political situation is unstable and unpredictable in Washington, Peking, Paris, London, Bonn, Tokyo, Jerusalem, Cairo, Damascus, and in many other capitals. The visit of Teng with Kissinger, which went almost unnoticed, a they hoped it would, merely 11lustrates the contemporary political confusion.

Wants to Know

Peking wants to know what is happening to President Nixon, and whether it can rely on the agreements reached by the Presideot in Peking and Shanghai. Washington wants to know what is happening meanwhila in the political changes that are taking place in China, and is much more worried than it lets on about the danger of war between Moscow and Peking.

The dominant personalities and tone of China's diplomacy are changing. Chou En-lai seemed to be the informing mind and the decisive voice in Peking when Nixon visited there. Cbou dealt with the practical details of policy and established a close personal relationship of respect and even admiration with Kissinger.

But the messages from Peking to Washingtoo now come directly from Mao Tse-tung through di'ferent envoys, On his last visit to Peking, Kissinger found that it was Mao Tse-tung who was defining not merely the philosophy of China as before, but the policy of China on Taiwan. Southeast Asia, Europe, Japan and atomic weapons. Chou En-lai remains the premier of China, but he seems to be less prominent now and references to him in diplomatic conversation are politely ignored by Chinese diplomats. Teng when he was in New York, insisted that China's cautious policy of accommodation with the United States remained the same and wanted to be assured that Washington felt the same way, but Chou En-lai's name and role were seldom men-

Relied on Chou

Washington wonders about all this. Kissinger is too shrewd and experienced to make a policy with a man instead of with a country, but he placed great reliance on Chou En-lai's moderation and historical vision. Chou told President Pompidou

France just before Pompidou died that as he (Chou) looked to the future, his concern was that China should recognize that its growing power should be tempered by "modesty," In another 50 years. Chou said, China would be so powerful that the next generation might be deceived by too much "pride" and might "lose their heads," Therefore, Chou remarked, it could be dangerous if, in these last years of the old regime, the rising generation in China did not pay attentioo to Mao Tse-tung's teaching to be

The philosophic and historical sweep of Chou En-lai's mind obviously impressed Kissinger, but the other No. 2 men in China, Llu Shao-chi and Lin Piao, disaopeared, and now even Chou seems to be iosing his infinence and changing his tune. Recently, he mocked President Nixon's favorite promise of a "generation of peace" and argued that "so long as imperialism exists, revolution and war are inevitable." So, back of all these domestic political arguments over Watergate and the succession to power in China France and Israel, the struggles of the nations and of power, life, poverty, and death in other countries go on all over the

It is a dicey and dangerous time, for internal political weak-nesses in nations not only impede progress hut encourage foreign adventures and even the risk of disastrous wars. This could happen in the Middle East and along the Sino-Soviet border much more easily and suddenly than most people suppose, and the burden of avolding it falls largely on the United States, and also, under the present circumstances in Washington, on the judgment and everyy of Henry

In the last few days, he has not only been seeing Teng from Peking and Gromyko from Moscow, the secretary-general of the UN, the president of Aigeria, Gen. Mosha Dayan of Israel and the intelligence chief of Syria, but the foreign ministers of the Latin American republics, the members of the foreign and military affairs committees of the Congress, and the inquisitive re-porters of the press.

Latest Symbol

Teng, the old revolutionary, is only the latest symbol of the problem. Soon, having talked to all these people, Kissinger will he seeing the Soviet foreign minister again in Geneva, before he goes on to the Middle East to try to stop the fighting between Israel and Syria along the Goian Heights, and before he arranges

Nixon's forthcoming visit to Mos-

So the importance of being Henry has its responsibilities. He doesn't have the answer to all thesa problems, Sen. Henry Jackson of Washington thinks Kissinger is all wrong on most of them, and even Kissinger's old colleagues in the universities are fussing at him, but the weaker President Nixon besomes politically, the more the leaders of the world like Teng turn to Kissinger for guidance and support. Fortunately, in the confusion of domestic and world politics. Kissinger had the good judgment to get married, and now all he has to do is find a house he can afford in Washington for his new bride, and then figure out

Middle East Policy and Oil

By C. L. Sulzberger

CAIRO.—If the energy crisis ac-complished nothing else, it did provoke thorough and up-to-date studies of the role of fuel in a complex modern world and the implications of oil to the ecococommerce and diplomacy of both petroleum produccrs and industrial consumers. The most recent study, completed after a late March meeting of Japanese, North American (U.S.A. and Canada) and European experts, has produced conciusions that are on the whole heartening, although predicated on certain contingencies. The assumption of this report, inspired by the Brookings Institution, is that neither true peace nor another major conflict will break out in the Middle East and that no important technological breakthrough, altering the energy picture, can be envisioned hetween now and 1985. The fundamental conclusion is that unilateral actions will not solve tha problems posed, which must he faced on a multilateral basis. It is argued: "Uncoordinated national efforts to deal with the economic impact of higher oll prices would be ineffective or WOTSE."

In order to improve their basic bargaining position, it is suggested that industrialized nations should consider establishing a data bank in which all oil transactions would be recorded. It is also proposed they should agree that all bilateral deals would be subject to scrutiny and possible

The study divides petroleumexporting nations among three groups. Six nations tend to maximize production. Two (Ku-wait and Libya) try to conserve their oil reserves by rationing. "Residual suppliers," headed hy Saudi Arabia, easily the largest producer, comprise the third group. In terms of fundamental policy, this indicates as much of division among producers as there is among consumers: for example between the U.S.A., France, the Netherlands and Japan.

The same distinction helps understand Middle East differences with regard to formulating a common policy both among oil suppliers and among those with little petroleum, like Egypt. Iran easily the largest supplier among the "maximizers"), Saudi Arabia

And the Sadat government in Cairo has swung toward a pro-U.S. stance which brings it closer to such conservative monarchies as Saudi Arabia and Iran with respect to Soviet-American ri-vairy.

The study can profitably be read by Middle Eastern govern-ments because it hints at changes in oil-producer and oil-consumer relationships, conditioned ul-timately by internal and external ambitions of nations in each bracket. It is also evident to petroleum exporters that imminent French elections may have an effect on the oil equation. Any French government formed in Mey will probably prove less inclined to pursue a go-it-alone petroieum policy than the Pom-pidou regime. Therefore, the consumers may feel encouraged to move mora speedily than in tha past toward the kind of multilateral approach to energy favored by the tricontinental conference, just as the producers find that their own differences in approach, already discernible, are hecoming more evident.

What must be avoided by both sides, as this shift develops, is any temptation to a confrontation in which either exporters or importers seek to press a tactical barraining advantage.

Impeachment Nixor Nixon Correct About Counsel

By George F. Will

Washington — Mr. Nizon: deportment, as President and taxpayer, proves that his is at original mind not imbilities original mind not inhibited by mere lack of precedent. That is why many people, including equ. sometimes assume that anything Mr. Nixon endorses thereby acquires a momentum for disrespect.

But at last Mr. Nixon has taken a stand that is no less respectable for being self-interested. He has requested that his counsel, James St. Clair, have the right to cross. examine witnesses and presen evidence in the House Judician Committee's impeachment pro ceedings. Precedents and right reason converge in support this request.

The precedents spac 170 year and include the rights accorded the counsel to the last man inpeached, a judge, in 1936. Rigin reason refutes the idea that s Clair's participation should severely restricted because committee is like a grand jur and opposing counsels do clash in grand juries.

Grand juries hear only prosecutor's case. Because proceedings are so one-sided to are secret, lest the disseminati of uncontested allegations jeops dize defendants' rights. Congre leaks like a sieve, so hearing could not be secret. Besides, should want them to be publ and, hence, conspicuously fair.

St. Clair's aggressive participe tion would slow things down but who really cares about the dr. ference between a brisk and lethargic snail's pace? Justle not speed, is the goal. Juste in today's setting requires a St Clair rampant on the field of

Adversary Process

Impeachment, at every step, 5 an adversary process, with h acceptable ethics of evasiveness and combativeness. So Mr. Nuon no longer needs to pretend that he wants "to get the truth out." With impeachment under war. Mr. Nixon's attitude, which has been so destructively inappropriate until now, suddenly is appro-priate to the adversary process. This attitude is: "Go ahead, try to prove me guilty, while I resist with all the recalcurant maneuvers sanctioned by the ethics of the adversary process." This process is messy, but is supposed to produce justice in courtrooms. It is our best hopfor justice in the committee room where the tone and substance and probably, outcome of the entire impeachment process will be determined.

Few congressmen have had the time or inclination to master the complexities of the Watergale evidence. So the sifting of eridence in the committee room will go a long way toward deciding how the full House will vote on a bill of impeachment, and that till will control the unfolding of events before the 100-man Sensis

The committee is the less cumbersome body invoived in the impeachment process. Hence, is the last, best hope for rectifying the glaring defects of the Senate Watergate hearings. It can ask the many questions that should have been hut were no put to John Dean and the other

last summer, and it will have new questions derived from the tapo and grand jury report it received But now with the impeach ment wheels turning, all questioning takes place in an adversary atmosphere, which makes cross-examination by St. Clair occs-Evidence of Mr. Nixon's involvement in the cover-up may be powerful even though largely circumstantial. But it may consist largely of wildly suspicious behavior by Mr. Nixon and his aides, and may include surviving bits of undoctored tapes that can just barely be construed as am-higuous in Mr. Nixon's favor. The cumulative effect of such evidence can be conclusive against Mr. Nixon but only if St. Clair first has an unfetter crack at discrediting it. Thus participation in the committee process is necessary for testing the strength of the evidence against Mr. Nixon. St. Clair resembles a cross be tween a beaver and an owl, with a spot of spider blood in him Industrious, wise and tricky, he has brought to the defense of Mr. Nixon a flair that is striking even considering the fact that his predecessors included J. Fred Buzhardt, so he had an easy as to follow. St. Clair's public spiritedness obvious, as is his duty to aggressive on his client's behalf have some compassion if St. Clair, tha professonal We may assume that he wants justice to be done.

There are a lot of agencies doing good work here, but some-thing like this turns off a lot of people from contributing to them," said John Anderson, director of the Foster Parents Plan here.

Foreign relief organizations and government officials are not sure how many people have sent money in reply to bogus charity appeals in the last few years. But they say Scandinavians, Australians and many Americans have been

Strong Urge

A strong urge on the part of many Westerners to help the needy wherever they are is the key to these rackets' success. The schemes work by sending letters to individuals or newspapers in various countries ask-ing for help. Often the appeals are accompanied by a fake letter from a Christian clergyman endorsing the "charity's" work, according to employees of several foreign relief agencies.

"Pussin seems to be the place where these groups originate. If the government goes after them, they just sort of disperse," Mr. Anderson said.

An official of the Health and Social Affairs Ministry said foreigners should not make donations directly by mail to an orphanage in Korea or a similar breanization which has sent out a direct appeal.

which will forward it to Korea. Overseas appeals for nonations to be sent directly to Korea with-out going through a registered organization generally are illegal. he said.

A small number of Koreans in Pusan, a southern port city, have been arrested for making frauoulent overseas appeals, the government said. But the arrests apparently have not deterred others from trying the same racket, seconding to Francis X. Carlin, director of Catholic relief services in Seoul.

"Before, they just mailed to individuals, and they built up a

Often the bogus letter writers use the name of legitimate orphanage or welfare organizarions, he said, but they give their own post-office bur number where money should be sent.

energy self-sufficiency. Mr. Sawhill defined the immediate goal of the administration s Project Innependence" as developing the capacity to endure an emburgo without yielding to foreign-policy oressures or seeing the U.S. economy crippled.

Louis Lutz, Galerie Hervé Odermatt, 85 bis Rue du Faubourg Saint-Honoré, Paris 8, to May

Lutz, at 33, is a sculptor in full possession of his means. In the present sbow his works, which are intended to be cast in bronze, are displayed in a hlack plastic casting that approximates the appearance of bronze. Massive, monumental nudes are done with the rough finish one associates with Rodin, Other, more polished works take on a surreal theatricality. Lutz uses sculpture to produce 8-foot-tall metaphors. The effect is striking, indeed imposing and one can but admire the high order of competence striving towards an expression. But there is also a sort of imbalance between complexity of the means and what they finally convey. One is perhaps on the threshold of something significant, but we will not be able to perceive it clearly until the artist somehow succeeds in making us forget his dexterity.

The organizers this year made the point that such things had their place in the street rather than in the stillness of a museum, and that it would be desirable to strive after a certain aesthetic quality. As a result this salon, though uneven, as any salon is bound to be, has a certain freshness about it and includes a number of effective works, Chile, Sweden, Norway, Italy and Czechoslovakia are represented in independent sec-

Piero Manzoni/Yves Klein, The Tate Gallery, Milbank, London SW1, to May 5.

If two clowns wish to "emmerder" the gullible rich (literally, as it turns out, for one of the Manzoni works is little containers of his own excrement), I have no particular objection. But for a gallery of international repute to confer upon these late and in my book unlamented buffoons an importance which their minuscule talents never warranted is a scandal, both from the viewpoint of artistic integrity, and the acute lack of large exhibition spaces in London -MAX WYKES-JOYCE.

COBRA-'48, '51, '74. Town Rail, Grand-Place, Brussels, to April 28.

COBRA art in a COBRA capital conjures up expectations not en-tirely fulfilled by this new show. COBRA (for Copenhagen, Brussels. Amsterdam, began in the 1940s with young artists in three northern capitals rebelling against rigid rules, commercial vulgarity and complacent attitudes. In the exhibition are a lot of documentation, photographs of the comgroup decorated with snaky splashy murals. There are writings, "reconstituted objects" from a 1949 show that include Dotremont's checky presentation of potatoes in patterns. With deadpan irony, too, the exhibition shows a printed criticism of the first big COBRA show in Belgium, held in Llège in 1951, sternly condemning the cheerful and lively art and its perpetrators alongside photos of exhibits.

COBRA is basically an art dependent on color and this it seems to lack in the current show, although two exhibarating oils by Alechinsky, a ceramic collage by Asger Jorn, some vivid Henry Heerups, Constant's deliberately big, infantile swipes, shine bright-iy. It is no full-scale retrospective but does provide an indication of the strong currents of fellow feeling among artists who produced a minor but still reverberating seneral, but more particularly contemporary sculpture, bas failmiserably at auction unless carried world-famous signatures—such as Brancusi or Calder. So the Veysset sale will be a test.

The works on view ln Claude Robert's showroom at 5 Avenue d'Eylau, Paris 16, through next Thursday, show that Vevsset carried the heritage of cubism into the abstract era.

Crossing the Border His strange group of two nude female aernbats, one standing on her head while the other steadies her by holding her legs, nwes something to Maillol, but a Maillol seen through cubist eyes. At the same time, the simplification of volume is such that it wouldn't take much to carry the subject matter beyond the boundaries of figurative art. The artist clearly crossed that border in many works, one of which, at least, seems to reflect the two women acrobats but could never be identified by anyone who had not seen the acrobats.

This is very much in tune with the taste of modern buyers, as illustrated by the high prices commanded by Miklos, an earlier prewar artist, whose carvings sell for as much as $20,000 on the dealers' market. Veyseet's gradual progress toward abstraction ls possibly what made one critic call him, rather unfairly, "a careful craftsman eager to reconcile all modern tendencies."

It has sometimes been pointed our that be worked under the influence of Romanesque art while some have detected a strain they related to the art of the Steppes. None of this is obvious from Veysset's actual work. That Veysset was in tune with his time is shown by some fascinating figures, semi-expressionist, semi-abstract, anticipailng Chayssac's paintings in very well in the past. On June three-dimensional space: again, 25, 1969, 11 sculptures came up this is in line with artistic trends that sell best these days, appreciated by public institutions than by private collectors, partly because be played a significant role in the development of aesthetic trends, such as art brut, which have now gained considerable momentum: He was the second artist, after Stanislas Wostan but beinre Arman, who used found as well as natural materials.

Yet, the beginnings of Raymond Veysset, born in the Correze, were not, no the whole revolutionary. After graduating from the Ecole Nation. .. Supcrieure des Beaux Arts, he studied with, among others faute painter Anore Derain, was ap-pointed professor at the Ecole des Beaus Arts and first exhibited his work at the Salon d'Automne and other traditional

Important Exhibitions From 1948, when he first exhibited at the Veulce Blennale, his works, mostly graphics at first, were seen at a number of important exhibitions—at the Musée Boymans in Rotterdam in 1949, at the Palais des Beaux Arts in Brussels in 1950 and at the international art fair in Boston in 1952,

An important turning point in his career came in 1949 when he became a niember of the committee of the Salon de la Jeunc Sculpture. From then on he veered toward pure abstraction and exhibited with arant-garde groups—the Groupe Xylons in Switzerland in .954 the Groupe Mexico in 1958, the Parisian Salon Comparaison ln 1960, and the "Antagonisme II; L'Obiet" at the Musee des Arts Decoratifs in Paris in 1962. His first important foreign buyer was the Recklinghausen West Germany museum, which bought a carving stone group in his early figu-rative atyle was knocked down at 928 francs. An excellent abstract cement work, which looks like a submarine plant, bad to be bought in, failing to rise above 420 frames. Another abstract work of brick, concrete and stone nf the same period and style as a big abstract work in the forthcoming sale, was bought in at the same price. It was obviously a bad time to sell-avant-garde work had not yet had much success at auction-anri perhaps the setting was not the best. The George V, at the time, was attuned in the 18th-century cabinct work, ormolu and other such frills.

So the auction on April 29 will show whether someone who was more than just a talented petit-moilre in contemporary sculpture cau make it al auction.

Toyota Car Plan for Iran

Toyota Motor Co., of Japan, has submitted to Iran a plan to manufacture cars there, starting in 1975, following an Iranian request for Toyota's cooperation in its automobile project. A Toyota spokesman says the firm's plan calls for the construction of a factory jointly with the Iran National Industrial Manufacturing Co. Initial annual production would be 10,000 small cars, with output expanding to 150,000 units a year within five years. This capacity is smaller than an Iranian plan to turn out 20,000 to 25,000 units initially and 250,000 units in five years, the apokesman adds.

U.S. Seeks More Bank Disclosure

The U.S. Controller of the Currency has proposed new regulations which would require the trust departments of national hanks to reveal substantially more information about their activlties. Banks with $100 million or more in trust accounts would be required to report the aggregate value of those accounts at the end of each year and make quarterly reports on the purchases and sales of stock if the transaction exceeded 10,000 shares or $500,000. The annual reports would require the banks to disclose what stocks they held, together with the number of shares bought and their market value.

THOMAS JEFFERSON An Intimate History

Aquarius or Reason

By Faux M. Brodie. Hiustraled. Norton, 531 pp. $12.50.

Reviewed by Christopher Lehmann-Haupt

GORE Vidal was kidding when he drew pictures in "Burr" of Thomas Jefferson surrounded by his halfbreed offspring by the mulatio slavewoman Sally Hemings. He was simply playing devil's advocate for a man who hated Jefferson. But now comes historian Pawn M. Brodie, of the University of California at Los Angeles, to aver in her psychohistorical "Thomas Jefferson: An Intimate History" what generations of white scholars have tried 10 deny-namely that Jefferson really did bed down with Sally Hemings and conceived numerous children by her. One of these white scholars, Dumas Malone, just last month published the fifth volume of his projected sixvolume "Jefferson the President," in which he denies the Hemings connection. Many black scholars, on the other hand, have long been insisting on the point. And worse, according to Prof. Brodie.

and not just platonically. Of course, Prof. Brodie's intentions are not quite the same as Gore Vidal's She is not spinning fictional anti-history. She deeply admires Jefferson, praises him for being "a genius of peace," and judges his two-term presidency as a positive turning point in the life of the young Republic No. her aim in gossiping is simply to focus on Jefferson's heart instead of his mind, in the hope of penetrating what Henry Adams called "the semi-transparent shadows" that have obscured Jefferson's character from posterily's view. It is only for this purpose that she speaks the unspeakable. But does she succeed in her purpose? At times her line of reasoning is hard to follow. She has the habit of playing with mirrors: Por instance, lacking specific evidence of the young Jefferson's relations with his parents, she writes. Because, however, most adults in bringing up their children cannot avoid imitating the cautionary devices of their own parents, and because even those who despise their own uphringing often inadvertently fall into the ancient maternal and paternal patterns, we may look to the letters of Jefferson to his own children for cives to the kind of admonitions he got from his mother, and possibly also from his father, during these formative years."

Elsewhere she shoots Freud from the hip: "The possibility can be suggested that since buildings often symbolize in dreams the body of a woman, Jefferson, in tearing oown and rebuilding Monticello after the pattern of [the Halle aux Bleds] where he first met Maria Cosway [his "lover" when he was minister to Francel, may have been unconsciously defining and redefining the ideal woman, which he had clearly not yet found in his own

And sometimes she gropes for extremely subtle evidence: for "that Sally Hemings had become for Jefferson a special preoccupation" by arguing that in a daily journal he kept during a trip in 1788, he used the word "mulatto" eight times in such sentences as "the hills are mulatto but also whitish"). Yet once Prof. Brodie gets over such bumps, her hiography gains considerable momentum. Not only does she make her gossip seem plausible, she wields it as an effective analysic tool (For instance, the reason that Jefferson grew increasingly reluctant to Edvocate emancipation as he grew older was hecause freeing his slaves would have meant giving up his beloved Monticello lifestyle, an important part of which was the companionship of Sally Hemings).

Not only does her gossip make Jefferson seem more warm and appealing personally and less the pure mind of democracy, but it also permits her to argue reasonahly that Jefferson's ideas were never purely theoretical (he seems to have been more in favor of emancipation in his youth, when revolution against England—and against his father?-were uppermost in his mind; similarly, his famous pronouncements on the superiority of agrarian to cosmopolitan life were made hefore he discovered the charms of Paris which in time were to alter somewhat his views on cities.

Finally, not only is Prof. Brodie's gossip interesting in itself, out it also affords her an approach to the other aspects of Jefferson's life that is highly entertaining. Not being obliged to trace his role in American history. soe is free to concentrate on the events that touched him most dramatically during his career. So the years of his presidency are summed up by the James Thomson Callender affair in which the vindictive journalist tried to expose his relationship 10 Sally Hemings, by the Burr conspiracy, and by his skillful maneuvering to avoid war with England And his old age is movingly distilled into an account of his late correspondence with his old friend and enemy John Adams.

In short, regardless of what one thinks of Prof. Brodie's speculations about Jefferson's private life, they make for interesting reading in many more ways than the obvious one. Almost as in-teresting, in fact, as Mr. Vidal's "Burr." And not half so mischierous either.

Ford Family's Trials

Washington is whether Vice-President Ford is thinking seriously about moving into the White House. It was started When John Osborne of the New Republic interviewed Ford, and the Vice-President speculated about whom he would appoint to his cebinet if he became president. This was followed by columnist William Safire's article in which Ford tried to clarify what he said to Osborne which, of course, increased the speculation. In fairness to Buchwald particularly in view of what's going on in Washington, no one in his position could help but think that he may be called to take on the reins of govern-ment, and the whole Ford family must be under tremendous strain.

I can just imagine what happens when the Vice-President comes home, He opens the door and hears "Who the devil is playing 'Hail to the Chief'?"

"We were just having fun, Gerry," his wife Betty says. "Weil it's not very funny. Ford replies. "Suppose I had

"I thought you were asleep when I did that." "How can I be when you keep talking in your sleep all night long?

"What do I say?" the Vice-President asks nervously. "You mumble over and over 'Ask not what your country can do for you, but what you can do for your country"." "Do I do that?" "That's not the worst of it." Betty says. "You keep stretching out your arms with your fingers in a V-for-victory signal."

"Gosh, I hope the Secret Servicemen haven't seen me. Betty. vice-president dreams about being president of the United States. It's only natural.

I'll bet you Nixon even dream-

The Fight to Keep 'Mein Kampf' Out of Print

MUNICH (AP).—The Bavarian state government, custodian of the copyright to Adolf Hitler's book "Mein Kampf," is considering legal action against a West German writer for the unsutherized use of quotes from the Nazi bible.

Andreas Gall, an official of the Munich Finance Ministry said that for the first time since World War II a West German has written a work which, although critical of the Nazi era, devotes more than half its space to Hitler's quotes.

"For this reason we denied permission," Mr. Gall said. He referred to historian Christian Zentner's book to be published by Paul-List-Verlag. "If Zentner now publishes the book after all. we shall investigate the matter and possibly stop publication by infunction," Mr. Gall added.

Un to now, Mr. Gall said, the Bavarien state government has managed to prevent German publishers from reprinting the Hitler work. However, it falled in its efforts to stop reprints in such countries as Argentina, Spain, Portugal, Brazil, Mexico, Greece, Madagascar and Leb-

We don't want brown money. Hitler money stinks," said Mr. Gall in reference to the brown shirts of Hitler's storm troopers and the former Brown House, the Nazi party's Munich headquarters.

Mr. Gall said that two months ago a publisher in the Netherlands reprinted 8,000 copies of "Metn Kampf," but before the Bavarian state government could lodge a protest with the Foreign Ministry in Bonn, Dutch police confiscated the books.

The Bayarian government was less fortunate in Italy, Mr. Gall said. An Italian court demanded during a trial between the Bayarthat the original copyright contract between Hitler and his publishers be produced as evidence. The Bavarians were unable to produce it, "because it was destroyed during the war," Mr. Gall said.

In Denmark two reprints have ppeared since World War II, Mr. Gall said. Bavarian efforts to get the reprints stopped were successful but took so long that all 16,000 copies had been sold before any action could be taken to halt distribution.

A London publisher has also recently reprinted the Hitler book, Mr. Gall said. He added that the Nazi publishers had sold their rights to several publishers abroad before the collapse of the Hitler regime. "Legally there is practically nothing we can do
